Commuters to Boston have been drawn to Hingham with its scenic harbor and pleasing blend of the old and new. This seashore town is close enough to the "big city" to offer views of the spectacular Boston skyline, and yet remains far enough removed to include an 18-mile shoreline and a 250-acre reservation among its many amenities. Other facilities include an indoor hockey rink, a country club, and equestrian attractions. Wompatuck State Park adds another expanse of naturally beautiful open space for outdoor adventure, recreation, and relaxation. Some of the homes in Hingham are antique residences that actually date back to colonial days. The town also offers an attractive blend of well-kept older homes and newer construction in a wide variety of architectural styles and price ranges. The shining jewel of cultural attractions is the South Shore Conservatory of Arts & Music.
