Once a strictly commercial section of the city, the Waterfront area features 19th century buildings and wharves that have been meticulously restored with dramatic results. These quaint structures with their unique features and pleasing architectural elements now house exciting new specialty shops and prime office space along with luxury apartments and fine condominiums graced by balconies and oversized picture windows that overlook the harbor. An area known for its exclusive residential enclaves, the Waterfront also offers residents the bustle and excitement of harbor living. The Waterfront is home to some of Boston's finest attractions, including the Aquarium, The World Trade Center, sightseeing boat tours, and popular outdoor cafes. Close by are Faneuil Hall and Quincy Marketplace with Waterfont Park and the Rose Kennedy Rose Garden—featuring a trellised walkway and lush picnic areas. Faneuil Hall originally stood at the head of Long Wharf, extending 2,000 feet into the harbor. This was the site of the final British evacuation on March 17, 1776. The wharves of Lewis, Sargent, Long, India, Rowes, and Commercial in this unique and historic neighborhood claim some of the most sought-after residential addresses in Greater Boston.
